Training Information:

This is another chapter in the Brain Series where we specifically take a look at trauma and how it is received by the brain, processed by the brain, and manifested in behavior. This workshop will inform and empower healing by identifying brain function related to trauma. Participants will be offered an objective perspective on reception and response to trauma in adolescent and adult brains. As previous brain series workshops, this can be carbon-copied and presented to community groups and providers, as well as to clients and families.

Objectives:

- Identify the three levels of the brain
- Build a classic understanding of brain function in lay terms
- Identify the path of physical or situational trauma in the brain
- Explore how this manifests
- Identify healing methods in a real way

Training Cost: $40.00 - to be included with this Registration form
